

Successful Investing Through Index Funds

Dan Solin has posted an excellent blog challenging two commonly-held beliefs for many investors. They are that actively managed funds will perform better now that the market is on the downside of the inevitable rollercoaster and that you should switch to a more conservative portfolio as you get older. He busts these myths with facts.

Read the details here: http://www.huffingtonpost.com/dan-solin/smart-advice-for-the-huff\_b\_99322.html

I have long held that most investors benefit from buying whole markets through Index Funds and that your needed investing strategy has nothing do with your personality. I'm happy to see other financial luminaries share these views and conduct research to test their assumptions.

I'd like to hear from you on these topics. Let's spread the word.